

Library match strikes $73,956 to capture Foundation grant

With a $30,000 infusion from the Friends of the Cambridge Library, the drive to match the $100,000 contribution of the Cambridge Foundation has reached $73,956 through November toward the construction goal of the new community library at the Amundson Center.

Under conditions set by the Foundation, the matching funds had to be raised in the community.

The Friends of the Cambridge Library have been a major benefactor, donating $145,615 last year toward the building program, and with the $30,000 donated in November, the total from the Friends has come to $175,615.

Over the past decade, the Friends have produced major fundraisers and taken in local donations, especially at its plant sale, used book sale and the arts and crafts fair. Much of the success was due to the leadership of Sharon Erb, Friends president.

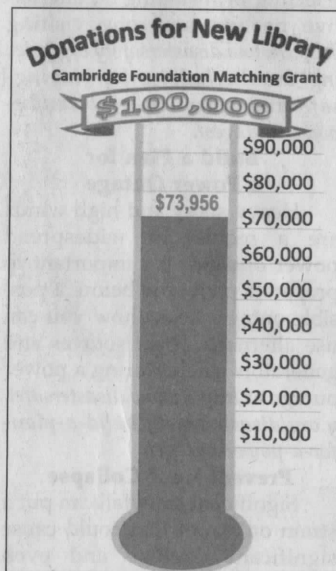

The Cambridge Community Library Capital Campaign recently mailed another fundraising appeal to all postal addresses in the 53523 ZIP code, hoping to reach the $100,000 match by the New Year.

"We hope to reach the $100,000 in matching funds by the holiday," said Capital Campaign Chair Bob Salov. "We have $26,044 to go. We can do it!"
